

The history of social work

The discipline examines the main problems of the evolution of the forms and methods of social assistance, charity, social service in Russia and abroad. In the course of this course, the main trends in the development of social work, its modern features and models are analyzed.

Fundamentals of familistic (family studies)

The discipline deals with various aspects of family and marriage relations, especially the development of theoretical thought on family issues. In the framework of this training course, the legal framework for the functioning of the family and the issues of family life are analyzed. Particular attention in the study of this discipline is paid to the age evolution of the family, and the livelihoods of dysfunctional and socially at risk families. A separate topic of the course is devoted to family policy abroad, primarily in Western countries.

Family Policy in Russia

This discipline is included in the undergraduate program in the direction of "Organization of work with youth." This discipline may also be included in the educational program of the magistracy in the direction of "Social Work". Discipline makes it possible to comprehend the evolution of the Russian family from antiquity to modernity, including during the periods of the Middle Ages, imperial development, and the Soviet era. The most important modern paradigms of family transformation, directions and prospects of family policy in the Russian Federation are considered.